

My daughter graduates from the transition class this July (2017) and although she only joined Educare last September (2016), it has been an amazing journey so far. From the first day my husband and I visited Educare, we were impressed by the reception, the environment, the staff, we immediately got the feeling that our daughter would feel at home. We were not wrong.

Her foundation before Primary school is very important and we were especially ecstatic when we discovered Educare ran the IPC curriculum.

Over the course of the year, we have marveled at the way the teachers and minders have helped build our daughters individuality whilst simultaneously enforcing the importance of manners and respect for others. Mrs Edirin's meticulousness and her ability to enthusiastically drive the kids to achieve their potential is rather admirable and evident in my daughter's level of independence today. The care, attention and overall connection the minders provide is second to none, my daughter always talks about, sometimes misses and always looks forward to seeing her class minders.

Ms. Granville is completely committed to providing a warm and nurturing environment for the children. She has done an amazing job staffing the school with teachers that are just as committed. Beyond our happiness with the school is our daughter's, which is most important. She cannot wait to leave for school every morning.

Extra-curricular activities are enlightening and have helped project a few of my daughter's strengths/talents, talents we intend to develop. School Programmes are well planned, thoroughly executed and are designed to teach children perfection, perseverance and how to have fun. The parents and teachers have such a good working relationship which makes execution flawless.

Children learn at their own pace and although the staff recognize this, they are 100% committed to the children excelling.

It is comforting to know that our daughter will go into primary school with a great head start. We are absolutely thrilled to have found an environment that is allowing our daughter to flourish and will prepare her for her future education, while at that same time providing her an opportunity to have fun with the friends she has made. We look forward to watching her continued development as she moves to the big school Greenoak International School.
